Short Bio

It's been a year and a half since I have started learning Web Development and decided to chose Frontend Development as a career option. In my Learning Curve I faced many ups and downs but that only made me better in this field, one things is for sure I love writing frontend code and other aspects of designing, making a smooth and interactive websites that really stands out in terms of experience and responsiveness. In my learning period of 1.5 yrs the most important thing that I learned is just don't make it work, make it right.
